FRIDAY EVENING, MAR. 25, 1904.

Reveals Father's Crime.

A dramatic story was unfolded at the trial, which terminated in Vienna, yesterday, of a man named Kaufmann, who was accused by his own daughter of a murder committed 10 years ago. The victim of the crime was a shopkeeper, who had been robbed of a large sum of money and brutally hacked to death. To the identity of the murderer there was absolutely no clue, but Kaufmann, frightened by the close investigation which was being made, accused a fellow-townsmen named Gensinger, the latter's wife, and an ex-soldier named Nagel of having committed the murder. He aided the police in weaving an elaborate web of circumstantial evidence around these three, and in the end the woman and the ex-soldier, between whom there had been an intrigue, were found guilty and sentenced to death. Gensinger being acquitted. On appeal, however, the death sentence was remitted, as is the custom in Austria when the evidence is of a purely circumstantial character. Nagel died a few years later in prison, where the woman, continually protesting her innocence, was rapidly losing her reason.

To this tragedy of justice miscarried there came a few weeks ago an astounding sequel. Kaufmann's wife, cleaning out a loft in their house, came across some property which she recognized as having belonged to the murdered shopkeeper. She confronted her husband with it, and eventually he confessed that he was the real murderer. They agreed to keep their guilty secret but their conversation had been overheard by their daughter, and, tortured by the thought that an innocent woman was consigned to a living death in jail, and that one life had paid the penalty of her father's long-concealed crime, she went to the police. There was a terrible scene in court when the daughter—tall, handsome girl of 20—almost incoherent with grief, told her story to the public prosecutor. Its truth was admitted by Kaufmann, who with callous unconcern told the judge that he went to church before killing his victim and prayed that his crime might be successful, and that its author might not be discovered. He was sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment.

Murdered in Revenge.

A murder, surrounded by some extraordinary circumstances, occurred in the early hours of Wednesday morning at Montreuil, France. The dead body of a man named Picot was found lying on the pavement, and there were no fewer than 29 deep wounds on his face, throat and neck. People living nearby stated that during the night they heard shouting and singing and the playing of an accordion, with which were mingled screams as of some one in agony. As the result of inquiries the police arrested a dustman named Petit, aged 20, who confessed to the crime. He stated that Picot had struck him without provocation, and that he resolved to be avenged. He went home for his knife, and told his friends, and about a dozen of them and several women went with him to look for Picot, whom they found at the corner of a street. "While I stabbed him in the face and neck," said Petit, "my friends sang and danced and played the accordion, so as to drown Picot's screams, and," he added cynically, "he squealed like a pig while I struck him." Although the murderer declared that none of his friends interfered, the police are satisfied that at least two others held Picot down while Petit killed him.

Lightning Behead's Chickens.

Lightning Tuesday night struck three times on John Miller's farm, south of Irwin, Pa. The first bolt hit the pig pen and a porker was struck on the head and killed. Next the house was hit by a bolt, which killed three chickens, tearing off their heads. The third flash struck the barn, starting a fire which consumed the building and grain. All the live stock was saved, except a cow that was stunned by the lightning.

The persistent rains of the past few weeks today resulted in the sinking of a portion of the village of Cuevas, near Malaga, Spain. There were 32 casualties.

READ IT THROUGH.

'Twould Spoil this Story to Tell it in the Headlines.
To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "over true tale." Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present, up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harmon, of Melfa Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced as I was." For sale by Richard Gibson.

All-white Bridal Carriage.

Dame Fashion set a new pace in Philadelphia yesterday, when an all-white bridal carriage was used for the first time at a wedding. Gayly decorated with ribbons of many colors, the coach was driven from the house of the bride to the church and from there back to the home of the bride's parents. The white coachman wore a high white hat and was garbed in pure white, and a white livery and a white whip. The coach, constructed on the Berlin's plan and designed only for weddings, is painted pure white, and is drawn by a pair of white horses. It has white curtains and cushions inside. The young couple thus inaugurating what is expected to be a fad for white bridal coaches this spring were Miss Clara B. Huffnagle and Allen R. Snyder. Miss Huffnagle, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Huffnagle, of Philadelphia. When the bridal coach drove up in front of the Huffnagle residence, about dusk yesterday, a great crowd soon gathered, attracted by the odd carriage. The vehicle was followed by the neighbors to the East Baptist Church, on east Columbia avenue, near Thompson street, where the bridal party alighted. The march to the altar was then begun and Rev. C. H. Woolston united the young couple. After the ceremony the coach brought Mr. Snyder and his bride back to the house, where a reception was held.

Tragedy Averted.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved" writes Mrs. W. Watkins of Pleasant City, Ohio. "Pneumonia had seized him and he was in a terrible cough fit, but he was saved. Doctors treated him, but he grew worse every day. Length we tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and our darling was saved. He's now sound and well." Everybody ought to know it's the only sure cure for Coughs, Colds and Lung diseases. Guaranteed by E. S. Leadbeater & Sons, druggists. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.
